

Home > News > Chennai

Young artists capture the beauty and chaos of cityscapes

The exhibition takes a self-reflective, inquiry-based approach, allowing the artists to delve deep into their thoughts, experiences, and observations about the impact of urbanisation.

DTNEXT Bureau | 12 Mar 2025 6:00 AM (Updated: 12 Mar 2025 6:00 AM)

Advertisement

Yaghnna's work at the exhibition

CHENNAI: InKo Centre and Diana's Art Room Studios present Urban Shock, an exhibition that brings together a group of young artists who explore the complexities of urban life through diverse artistic mediums. Curated by Diana Shatish and S Vijayaraghavan, the show captures personal and thought-provoking perspectives on urbanisation, conflict, and change through paintings, sculptures, photography, mixed media installations, and assemblages.

The exhibition takes a self-reflective, inquiry-based approach, allowing the artists to delve deep into their thoughts, experiences, and observations about the impact of urbanisation. It brings out the chaos, beauty, and challenges that come with modern urban living, encouraging viewers to pause and reflect.

The exhibition is built around a methodology known as inquiry-based processes, which involves in-depth research, data collection, multiple drafts, interviews, and self-reflection. This approach encourages artists to use their creative process as a tool to explore personal and social issues, allowing their art to evolve naturally rather than following a predetermined outcome. The exhibition features works by 20 young artists, including Sai Akhil Anand, Tarika Ram, Aisha DMG, Vriti Baid, Pooja, Yaghnna JY, Eashaan S P, Maya Anup, R. Rithvik Rathna, Sashangh J, Mahi Kelunni Asha, Prakrti Prashanth, Abeer Saraogi, SriNidhi, Vihaan Baid, Anika Reddy, Sahana Soundararajan, Miraya Agarwal, Sathvika Rajendran, and Amita Sai.

The exhibition is on display at The Gallery, InKo Centre until April 5.

